Valley View Public School, a small rural school located in the hamlet of Greenwood within Pickering, Ontario, has a rich history and deep roots in its community. The school has a long-standing history of excellence. The school is located next to the Greenwood Public Library, most noted for once being a one-room school house (Greenwood School) where the late Prime Minister John Diefenbaker attended as a child, and also where his father taught. The staff models a community of learners as they continue to work diligently on improving student achievement. They work as a team in professional learning communities to engage in sharing, refining and reflective practices.

J. Clarke Richardson Collegiate

7.38 KM away

High

1355 Harwood Ave N, Ajax, ON L1Z 1Y7, Canada

Opened in September of 2002, J. Clarke Richardson Collegiate is part of the innovative Ajax Multi-Use School Project which combines the high schools of the Durham DSB (J. Clarke Richardson Collegiate) and the Durham Catholic DSB (Notre Dame CSS) along with a shared cafeteria, theatre and main sports field into one large campus. Richardson Collegiate occupies the southern portion of the site while Notre Dame occupies the northern portion. The schools are separated on the inside by the shared cafeteria and theatre. The complex accommodates approximately 3,000 students plus 250 staff in total, yet the schools operate in isolation from each other so the feeling is that of a regular, large high school. The shared facilities includes a 500 seat theatre, a food court that can seat 1,000 persons and the irrigated outdoor sports field. The Richardson culinary arts program operates out of a state of the art kitchen and provides the food for both student populations before school and at lunch.
